FOLTRY

A WINTER DITTY.

The North Wind cried unto the Earth "Alas! for all your summer flow'ra; I traverse only barren bow'rs, What record have you of the hours When fragrant buds were ripe for birth?

To him the sweet, wise Earth replied, "Decay is only surface deep, While tempests rage and storm-clouds weep Within my heart spring lies asleep, Though winter's garb'is spread outside,

"The dead year's flow'rs Love keeps, and knows"

By many a lover's smile made blest, By many a mourner's tears caressed—
Oh! of all loveliness, the best,
Lives ever—fearless of time's snows?"
—The Lady.

ROSE O' MINE.

"What sense of lovely tints is left? What memory of perfumed musk? Of splendid noon and balmy dusk? I only find an empty husk— A beauty of all charm bereft."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Thrice was the Breed theater filled to the capacity yesterday, and even then, the patrons could not be accemmodated with seats. It was a clear case of "Standing Room Only" during the entire day, and the great throngs were good natured and showed great patience in awaiting an opportunity to secure an admission and later a seat.

tes are seen in their specialities, and nelude the greatest baseball generals: John J. McGraw and Connie Mack, the benomenal exhibitions of the great athewson, the grand deliveries of sombs, Plank, Bender and Marquard. Home Run Saker is seen in full action, and every sensational play thrown o nihe screen as if you were on the grounds. The attendance, the largest ever seen at a championable game, is clearly shown, also all the 38d-degree fans.

The pictures are marvels of excel-lence and show the Bolo grounds, New York, and Shibe park, Philadelphia, with the great grandstands lilled to with the great grandstands lilled to capacity with cager fans. Incidentally, all of the by-play and warming-up stunts are shown for the delectation of the motion-picture lovers.

The whole film was a pronounced success, judging from the statements of the followers of the great national pame, who were present last evening. As a memerato of the presentation of the world's championship baseball games the manager is giving his patrons an exceptionally attractive postcard with an unusually fine photograph of Mr. Daniel Murphy, the baseball pride of Norwich, recently elected captain of his great team. Appearing on the erreen is a stareopticon display of all of the great players, which is introduced immediately preceding the motion picture, and makes a great hit. The beautiful side of Mr. Murphy wins a round of applause.
